Mr. K. Part
 Reclamation

Dear Mr. Part,

I think the whole thing is simple. The public own the water behind Angostura dam. Reclamation wants to sell the water or use it in the best way. The farmers used the water since the dam was built to water crops. They paid something for the water but the Angostura book does not say. This is a very important question. [How much did the farmers pay.] The book needs to tell this. Now the swimmers and people with motorboats want the water. The tribe want the water. [The book does not say how much will the swimmers or the tribe pay.] The books needs to say this also. The farmers pay more they keep the water or the swimmers or tribe pay more they get the water. This is the answer to the water question and needs to be in the book this way. Thank you in advance. [Also how much the book cost.]

1. The District, having paid off distribution system construction costs in 1998, is now paying construction costs of the dam. Operations and maintenance costs for the unit are also paid by the District, ranging from $14.03 per acre to $16.50 per acre, depending on the class of the land irrigated.
2. Recreationists do not pay any construction costs or operations and maintenance costs of the Angostura Unit under present cost allocations. Recreation is considered a non-reimbursable benefit under the Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin Program, which has caused construction costs of the unit to be discounted. The Tribes would not pay if they received water from the unit.
3. Reclamation has spent $1.8 million on the complete NEPA process to date, including this EIS.
